Punishment is a process by which a consequence immediately follows a behavior which decreases the likelihood of repetition. This is from B.F. Skinner's theory of operant conditioning which entails changing behavior by the use of reinforcement.

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) is the federal agency responsible for conducting research and making recommendations for the prevention of work-related injury and illness.

Construct validity refers to the degree to which a test or other measure assesses the theoretical construct it is supposed to measure such as candidate abilities, e.g. critical reasoning skills.
